Where the Money will go?

While DIMFF does receive support from the University funds through small donations at the events and through the small contributions of some of our community sponsors, these revenues only could cover a portion of the expenses to put on the festival, and to support the monetary awards, but was never sufficient income to make our festival fully accessible. But this year with the global pandemic has certainly created a huge impact on the financial sectors. Hence, we might not even be able to support the indie filmmakers with the award money. It will be exceptionally difficult to ensure juries and festival branding commitments. Foreseeing the crisis part both at the end of University donation or the community support, we are turning to you to crowdsource the rest of the remaining funds necessary for this year's festival.
